AS NAZI FORCES FLEE

Rome Not Open City to Nazis As Yanks Enter

Germans Destroy Parts of Capital

By EDWARD KENNEDY

ROME, June 4 (AP)—The Allied Fifth army entered Rome slowly today, for the Germans had dropped all pretense that it was an "open city."

Self-propelled guns, tanks and armor impeded the progress of the Allied troops as they pushed through the suburbs toward the center of the city along the Cassinian way.

This dispatch was filed at 5 p. m.—11:35 a. m. Eastern War Time—or more than three hours before the final cleanup.

Gen. Clark Under Fire

Early in the afternoon Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Fifth, arrived in the fighting area. He was whizzed over his head. Military police accompanying him fired on the snipers. The general, without insignia, was wearing his customary black riding boots and his shirt was open at the collar.

The Germans were apparently bent on inflicting as many casualties and doing as much damage as possible, but the Fifth army poured heavy reinforcements into the show-down fight. The day was hot and dusty.

The powerful American armored and infantry columns which had swept up the Cassinian way were held up for hours by pockets of fiercely resisting Germans as they approached the suburbs of the city.

Concealed Guns Open Up

Self-propelled guns concealed in the suburban areas adjacent to the highway kept the road under intermittent shell fire which pinned down American troops in some places.

The Germans piled up wrecked vehicles to form road blocks manned by small but desperate groups. Three of these were broken by sharp American tank attacks during the morning.

In the early afternoon a new road block on the outskirts of the capital supported by fire from German tanks and guns placed some distance away proved a more serious obstacle and American armor launched a vigorous assault against it.

Germans Apply Torch

Shortly after 3:30 p. m. great clouds of thick smoke rose from Rome as the Germans began demolitions in earnest.

Two doctors, Maj. John M. Samuel, Little Rock, Ark., and Capt. Edward M. Svetich, worked on both German and American wounded lying on stretchers in one building.

An infantry platoon commanded by Lt. Andrew Salonsky, Carnegie, Pa., captured thirty-eight German prisoners and was striving to get them to cages in the rear but the number of prisoners was so great that considerable difficulty was experienced in handling them in the general confusion of battle.

Pvt. Francis G. Crites, Sutton, W. Va., shot three fleeing Germans from their motorcycles. Pfc. Robert Heffer, Fleetwood, Pa., shot up three German halftracks.

135 Germans Mutiny; Shoot Two Officers

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN THE SUBURBS OF ROME, June 4 (AP)—One hundred and thirty-five German soldiers mutinied, shot two officers and surrendered to an American infantry company west of Lariano, as the final drive toward Rome got under way, it was reported today.

The Germans were said to have explained that their act was provoked when the officers shot two privates who were trying to desert.

Describes Fall of Rome: AP Correspondent Daniel De Luce Gets Ahead of Troops Taking City

By DANIEL DE LUCE

ROME, June 4 (AP)—Rome, the Eternal City, was liberated tonight by tanks and infantry troops of the Allied Fifth army which battled German rear-guards to the edge of the ancient forum.

A force from the old Anzio beachhead completed the mopup of Nazi forces at 9:15 p. m. (3:15 p. m., Eastern War Time) by knocking out an enemy scout car in front of the Bank of Italy, almost within the shadow of the column erected to Emperor Trajan, who ruled the Romans from 98 to 117 A. D.

Battle in Suburbs

The Fifth army force fought its way into the heart of the city after a four-hour battle against German armor in the suburbs of the ancient capital.

In a dawn dash from Borgata Finocchietto, thirteen miles distant on the Via Cassilina, a spearhead of twenty-four Sherman tanks, eight armored cars and 150 United States and Canadian infantrymen pushed beyond suburban Torre Spaccata before they ran headlong into a German road block.

Old men and young girls and toddling children were waving the Americans on when the fire of German 88-millimeter guns knocked out the leading tank and snipers started pouring machine-gun fire from hideouts next to a white church whose bells were ringing for early mass.

Kissed by Italian

An Italian partisan, who said the Fascists had put out his left eye in torturing him, kissed me on the cheek and volunteered the information that he was leading an armed band of civilians back into Rome "to kill Germans."

Smiling, brown-eyed girls brought bouquets of flowers to dust-covered riflemen who were crawling up a

South Is Solid For Byrd, Barr Informs Nation

New Deal Defeat Looms, He Asserts

NEW YORK, June 4 (AP)—John U. Barr, national chairman of the Draft Byrd for President Campaign, said today the Virginia senator, as the Democratic nominee, would be assured of "every one of the 180 electoral votes" from the southern and border states.

Declaring that recent developments in Florida, Louisiana, South Carolina and Texas showed the New Deal had reached "the day of political reckoning of the long suffering Southland," Barr said in a statement:

"We of the South are now fully aware that the southern and border states cast 180 of the needed 266 (votes) to win in the electoral college. One hundred twenty-four of these votes come from Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee and Texas."

"Most of these states have active and well organized Draft Byrd organizations. Our contacts in these states inform us that as the situation stands today not a single one of their 124 electoral votes is assured to a New Deal nominee."

"In the border states of Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky, West Virginia, Missouri and Oklahoma, we do not have contacts quite as close, but those that we do have inform us that not only are they lost to the New Deal, but that it would take a genuine anti-New Deal Democrat of Senator Byrd's type to hold these fifty-six electoral votes in the Democratic total."

Barr said Byrd's backers had done some sampling in the East and middle West and were convinced he would draw 5,000,000 independent voters in the pivotal states.

It's Different Now: Germany Asks Allies To Make Italian Capital an Open City

LONDON, June 4 (AP)—Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring has sent the Allies proposals that Rome be regarded as an open city, a special announcement from Hitler's headquarters said tonight. The statement was broadcast by the German radio.

(This Nazi report was received only after a dispatch filed from Rome, announced crushing of the last German resistance units within the city.)

The broadcast, as recorded by the ministry of information, said:

"The German high command announced the supreme commander of German troops in Italy, Field Marshal Kesselring, has submitted the following proposals to the Vatican with the request that they should be conveyed to the Anglo-American high command:

"The proposals confirmed recognition of Rome as an open city and these proposals read as follows:

"1—That the belligerents recognize Rome as an open city.

"2—Limits of the open city shall be as follows: from San Paolo except for a railway line to the north up to Piazza Magliore, then from Piazza Magliore following the railway line and the station Tiburtina to the east of the Villa Chigi.

"3—The railway line and Tiburtina station shall be outside the open city area from Villa Chigi up to the Tiber bend one and a half kilometers (ninetenths of a mile) south south-

Italian Public Greet Liberators with Joy

By SID FEDER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Naples, June 4 (AP)—Fifth army troops captured ancient Rome tonight, smashing German resistance in the heart of the Eternal City and sweeping on northward in pursuit of battered German forces which had dynamited some installations.

How much of the city was razed by the beaten German garrison was not immediately learned, but most of the bitter all-day fighting occurred in the suburban areas.

A smoke pall hung over parts of the city where the Germans began their demolitions shortly after 3:30 p. m. (The BBC in a broadcast recorded by NBC said this indicated the Germans had "probably destroyed the bridges over the Tiber" river, which runs southward through the city and then southwest to the Tyrrhenian sea. Across the Tiber lies Vatican City.)

The mopup of the heart of Rome—the first European capital to fall to Allied troops—was completed at 9:15 p. m. (3:15 p. m., eastern war time) as an Allied force knocked out the last German rearguard unit in front of the Bank of Italy, almost within the shadow of Trajan's column.

To the north of the city warplanes battered at fleeing German transports, wrecking or damaging at least 600 motor vehicles, as the Allied forces sought to annihilate the remaining Nazi divisions in Italy.

FIRST AXIS CAPITAL CAPTURED

The huge air-wrecked toll of Nazi transports on congested roads above Rome indicated the enemy intended no major stand in the ancient city—first European capital to be entered by Allied troops.

Hysterical with joy, Roman citizens at the city's outskirts amid kisses and tears waved on United States and Canadian tanks and infantrymen dashing up the Via Cassilina and then battering into German defenders holding the suburbs, a front dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Daniel De Luce said.

Opposition appeared to be tapering off.

Headquarters did not identify the first troops entering Rome.

The enemy made it a battle every foot of the way through the suburbs into Rome. The Germans hurled all they had—tanks, armor and artillery—into fierce fighting to block the Fifth army steamroller at least until they could pull out more of their own menaced forces.

ONLY SPORADIC RESISTANCE

"Troops of the Fifth army entered the city limits of Rome today. Sporadic resistance continues," the brief Allied announcement said.

This break into Rome, center of Catholicism and once the seat of the ancient Roman empire, came twenty-four days after the Allies unleashed a powerful combined offensive of the Fifth and Eighth armies, and twelve days after Fifth army men on the Anzio beachhead hurled forth their powerdrive aimed at the capital.

Lashing at the Nazi columns retreating from Rome, Allied fighter-bombers destroyed or damaged at least 600 motor vehicles, finding "excellent targets in congested traffic" above the city to Viterbo, Lake Bracciano and Lake Bolsena, headquarters said.

Other planes struck troop concentrations and gun positions.

United States heavy bombers 500 to 750 strong smashed meanwhile at targets on two main rail lines on the French-Italian frontier.

BOMB RETREATING NAZIS

The fighter-bombers found the Nazi columns retreating as far north as Viterbo, thirty-eight miles above Rome, and Lake Bracciano, fifty miles from the capital.

Catholic Leader Calls Capture Of Rome "Heartening to All"

By The Associated Press]

Monsignor Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, yesterday (Sunday) called the liberation of Rome "very heartening to all of us."

He said in Washington he was personally delighted by the "very great victory" and particularly so in view of the short battle for the city itself which he said must have meant saving of the lives of hundreds of American boys.

All of us, he said, should be grateful that the circumstances of the fighting indicate the city was taken cognant, over without the destruction of religious and historical centers which a full-scale siege would have entailed.

Last Tuesday the whole American episcopacy of the Catholic church made public through Monsignor Ready's organization a cablegram to Pope Pius XII expressing confidence that the Allied commanders would "find a way to victory" without such destruction.

There was no comment from the apostolic delegate to Washington, the most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani.

Nazi Lines Move To North of Rome

Berlin Broadcast Announces Stand

LONDON, June 4 (AP)—The German lines have been moved to the northwest of Rome, a special communique from Hitler's headquarters said tonight.

The DNB broadcast communique said:

"As the front line in the course of the present fighting in Italy was gradually approaching nearer and nearer to the city of Rome there was danger that Rome, one of the oldest cultural centers of the world, would be directly involved in the present fighting."

"Hitler has ordered withdrawal of German troops to the northwest of Rome in order to prevent the destruction of Rome."

"The struggle in Italy will be continued with unshakable determination with the aim of breaking the enemy attacks and to force final victory for Germany and her Allies."

"The necessary measures for an eventual German victory are being taken in close collaboration with Fascist Italy and other Allied powers."

"The year of invasion will bring Germany's enemies an annihilating defeat at the most decisive moment."

Americans Bomb Invasion Coast

1,200 Planes Hit Targets in France

By W. W. HERCHER

LONDON, June 4 (AP)—Upward of 1,200 American heavy bombers struck Europe again today—some 500 pounding German strongholds along the invasion coast while their comrades from the Mediterranean made a strong attempt to sever two main rail lines between France and Italy.

"Swarms of medium bombers and fighter bombers from Britain kept the thunderous assaults going as for the second straight day the Fortress and Liberators returned from France without loss after saturating defenses around Boulogne with 1,500 tons of bombs."

Spitfire bombers and fighters hammered enemy radio installations along the Northern coast of France this evening and the air ministry announced that more links in the Nazi radio chain had been broken.

Between 500 and 750 Fifteenth air force heavy bombers swept up from Southern Italy and attacked such vital rail centers as Turin and Genoa.

One force hit the Turin yards, the double-track Mount Cenis railroad leading west from Turin to Lyon, France, the bridge on the Italian side of the Modane tunnel through the Alps, and tracks near St. Michel on the French side.

Other bombers singled out the Riviera line, bombing a viaduct southwest of Cannes and the Var river bridge, southwest of Nice, while (Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

MOSCOW, June 4 (AP)—The Russian army newspaper Red Star complimented highly today the first American fliers to land on a Russian base and declared the first shuttle bombing of German targets "will be followed by a second, third, etcetera."

A dispatch by Lt. Col. Leonid Vysokostrovsky from the base where the Americans landed Friday said "a multitude of heavy bombers passed overhead in ranks as though on parade."

He reported that a particularly heavy blow was struck by the bombers at a large railway junction in Rumania where four tons of bombs were dropped and that four other major targets were hit en route to Russia.

"American pilots," Vysokostrovsky wrote, "made a very pleasant impression on Soviet officers. These young, strong people are skillful in everything they do. When they clean up a plane they do it together quickly. When they work in camp (Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

6 Escape Death In Bay Accident

Hospital Employees 7 Hours in Water

BALTIMORE, June 4 (AP)—Three nurses and three medical students from Johns Hopkins hospital were rescued from the Chesapeake bay early this morning after seven terrifying hours spent in inky waters when their sailboat overturned.

The nurses and two of the medical students were rescued by three navy men from Hawkins Point when they were sighted clinging to their overturned boat. The third medical student was picked up by a fishing boat after he had spent most of the night swimming in a life preserver in search of help.

All were rushed to the Johns Hopkins hospital and treated for exposure and bruises.

They were:

Miss Jacqueline Clay, 21, of Barbourville, W. Va., a student nurse;

Miss Susan Elder, 21, of Hydes, Md., a graduate nurse;

Miss Marie Foster, 21, of Monkton, Md., a graduate nurse;

Private Edgar Woodsey, of Thomasville, Ga.;

Apprentice Seaman Earl White, of Jackson, Miss.;

Private Rufus Nimmons, of Seneca, S. C.

Seaman White said the party had left a slip near Sparrows Point about 9 p. m. Saturday for a sailing cruise to Love Point. Their boat overturned shortly after midnight while making a turn at Sparrows Point. Private Nimmons swam away about an hour later in search of help.

Elton C. Fay Says:

Fall of Rome Expected To Align Faltering Nations with Allies

By ELTON C. FAY
Associated Press War Analyst

The decision of the Allies early this year that Rome should be captured was predicated to a great extent on reasons of prestige and world politics rather than those of purely military character.

In retrospect, it is evident that Prime Minister Churchill's statement last February that the mission of the Allied armies in Italy was to take Rome reflected the belief of American and British leaders that to wrest the Catholic capital from the Nazis would produce results in central warring Axis satellite nations, uncertain neutrals and among people within conquered nations and even Germany itself.

DeGaulle to Pay Visit to London

Will See Churchill Even if U. S. Balks

By JOHN HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, June 4 (AP)—Gen. Charles DeGaulle is expected here to carry through his acceptance of Prime Minister Churchill's invitation to visit London even though no top American official from Washington joins in.

Both United States and French diplomatic officials said today that DeGaulle unquestionably would make the trip despite protests from his Algerian headquarters that he might refuse to go unless assured of American representation.

No Strings to Invitation

The general, it was learned, accepted the invitation just as Mr. Churchill extended it—without strings as to United States participation.

In the circumstances, American experts expected that if this country's views are called for in the course of the DeGaulle-Churchill conversations they could be stated by General Eisenhower or, in his name, by his political advisor, William Phillips, former undersecretary of state.

Algiers Displeased

Despite the strong expressions of displeasure coming from Algiers since the proposed meeting was announced by Churchill ten days ago it was evident that there is no intention here of modifying the official policy of keeping arrangements with the French National committee for the liberation of France on a military rather than a diplomatic basis. What may be accomplished at the military level, Central Italy was desirable.

Japanese Troops Gain Six Miles In Drive for City of Changsha

By SPENCER MOOSA

CHUNGKING, June 4 (AP)—Japanese troops have ploughed through Changsha and stabbed six miles beyond the town toward Changsha, while another column in the many-sided Hunan province offensive has attempted an assault toward Lianyungang to the east for an encircling movement against the major objective, a Chinese communique announced tonight.

Lianyungang lies thirty miles due east of Changsha and its possession would enable the invaders to attack the city directly from the east over mostly flat country. The column struck southward yesterday

Burma Situation Appears Better

Officers Express Guarded Optimism

By CHARLES A. GRUMICH
SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, KANDY, CEYLON, June 4. (AP)—Results thus far of the Allied into-Burma campaigns "can be regarded with satisfaction, though not with complacency," an official headquarters summary said today.

Expressing guarded optimism, the review reported that the arrival of the monsoons brought but little slackening of aerial and ground operations, and added:

"To the Japanese, Burma shows signs which must appear ominous of becoming a dangerous running sore, draining away men and supplies, whose reinforcement and replacement will grow more costly and difficult as Allied pressure increases."

Allies Much Stronger

All operations including those in Arakan, and those of Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's Americans, Chinese and Chindits, and the Japanese thrust in Assam, "have proved that now in equipment, training, toughness and endurance, the troops of the United Nations are more than a match for the Japanese," the summary declared.

"Overwhelming air superiority all over the theater, and the absence of any challenge at sea, in the Bay of Bengal and the Indian ocean, have been powerful factors in our favor against the Japanese."

Supreme in Air

The account said that in May 78 enemy aircraft were destroyed, as against our Allied loss of twenty-seven planes.

Today's headquarters communique reported that Allied troops have forced the Japanese to abandon some of their positions northwest of the Indian town of Kohima.

No mention was made of the North Burma fighting for Myitkya. This probably was attributable to weather interference with army signals. Last reports from Myitkya yesterday said the Chinese and Americans were battling at the north of Myitkya, while in the southern part of that Japanese bastion the Chinese had retaken the railway station and were making slow but steady progress within the town.

AP Takes Steps To Guard against Erroneous Reports

[By The Associated Press]
Additional safeguards, with the aid and approval of Allied censorship authorities, have been put into effect in the London office of the Associated Press as a result of an erroneous invasion flash sent Saturday inadvertently by an inexperienced girl operator and transmitted over all A.P. news wires.

A message today from Robert Bunnell, chief of AP's London bureau, said appropriate action had been taken in full consultation with the authorities to guarantee censorship control and transmission supervision over facilities furnishing direct connections between London and New York offices.

The erroneous flash, saying that General Eisenhower's headquarters announced Allied landings in France, was sent by a 22-year-old British girl, Joan Ellis, who had punched it out while practicing on a machine not at the time in operation.

other formations hit the Genoa rail yards and the Reno viaduct to the east.

Yards at Novi Legure, twenty-five miles north of Genoa, and the Harbor at Savona, twenty-five miles west of Genoa, also were targets.

In this seventeenth successive day of attack for American light and medium bombers, more than 250 of them ranged along 200 miles of French coast line. A section of one bridge, representing about one-quarter of its length, was tumbled into the Seine river.

it was said, is a matter for Eisenhower to decide.

Even in that respect, however, the extent of Eisenhower's authority is unclear, at least on the public record. His status as an American general is subordinate to his rank as an Allied commander-in-chief which would enable him to speak in the name of both the British and American governments provided he had proper directives from each. Whether such directives have been issued has never been announced.

than 15,000 now taken by the Fifth army alone. The Eighth army has captured at least 6,000. Five of the eighteen German divisions engaged in Italy already had been virtually annihilated. Thus the Allies were well along in their avowed purpose of this offensive to crush the Nazi legions.

Battlefields were strewn with vast amounts of wrecked Nazi equipment, losses which would necessitate large-scale rearming of many of the retreating enemy.

The blistering drive to Rome started early this morning with several Fifth army spearheads pushing westward from the neighborhood of fallen Valmontone, twenty miles from the capital. Then the Allies ran into bitter opposition, fighting it out inch by inch at first through the suburbs. But the pressure apparently began to tell on the Germans, and tonight resistance fell off.

Headquarters earlier, before the Rome announcement, had reported the Germans resisting between the Alban hills, where new heights were seized, and the Tiber flowing into the sea sixteen miles from Rome.

City tax bills will be in the mails in about three weeks, it was announced yesterday by Charles F. Burke, Jr., city tax collector.

All bills will be mailed out at the same time.

Burke estimated that 25,000 bills will be mailed. Of this number 16,500 are for real estate and 8,500 for automobiles.

The city tax department has been working day and night preparing the bills.

County tax bills have already been distributed and those paying them in June will be entitled to a five per cent discount.

GIRL'S SOLO FLIGHT DELAYED BY WEATHER

Bumpy air conditions made it impossible for Miss Helen Carolan, 19, to take her scheduled solo flight, at Mexico Farms, yesterday. Weather conditions permitting, she will make the flight Monday evening.

Miss Carolan took a minimum of instruction from Virgil A. Parker and if her solo attempt is successful she plans to enter the women's ferrying command.

Kennedy Is Improved

John Henry Kennedy, 42, of Washington, D. C., who state police said admitted attempting to kill himself, was in a "fair" condition in Memorial hospital last evening.

Kennedy was admitted to the hospital Friday evening in a "critical" condition, suffering from severe cuts of the throat and chest. Kennedy apparently cut himself with a pocketknife he was carrying when he was found near Hyndman Friday afternoon, police said.

Westernport Man Writes of Life In German Prison

Sgt. Biggs Tells Parents He Is Well; Studying Photography

By GEORGE W. DADDYSMAN
WESTERNPORT, June 4.—Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Biggs, 225 Walnut street, received a letter from their son, Staff Sgt. Clarence H. Biggs, a war prisoner of Germany, this week, Feb. 22, 1944.

"Dear Mom and Dad: "Although it has been some time since I wrote you last, for some reason I don't know just how to begin or what to say. By now I suppose you have been officially notified that I am a prisoner-of-war. I am in good health and not injured in any way. We keep in good physical condition by taking exercises or walking whenever the weather permits. We have no work to do except that which is for our own benefit. I am attending a school run by other Americans and am studying photography.

"The Red Cross furnishes us with clothes and toilet articles, each week, provides each of us with a food parcel. Should you send a parcel I would appreciate it very much if it contained some razor blades, Gillette type, hard candy, deck of playing cards.

"I hope all of the family is well and in good spirits. Tell them all that I think of them constantly for them please to write. That's all for now. Please advise all don't worry.

"CLARENCE"

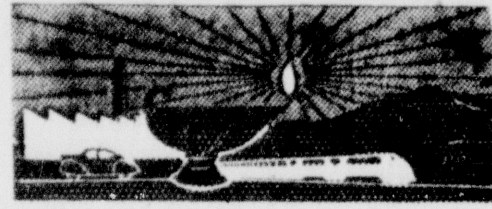

In the letter he speaks of studying photography which is a hobby he has been vitally interested in. He had up-to-date equipment at home where he devoted much time to this work. His mother says there is no doubt it is his writing, as she would know it if it had not been signed, also by the thought conveyed.

Staff Sgt. Biggs was a waist gunner on a Flying Fortress of the Eighth air force.

At a public ceremony, before a number of relatives and friends, the parents were presented with an Army Medal awarded Sgt. Biggs on April 23. Sgt. Biggs is a former Evening Times carrier.

The Land-Grant Railroad Rates

BY THE SIGNIFICANT VOTE OF 236 to 16, the House at Washington has passed a measure repealing the land-grant statute under which the railroads of the nation have been required for seventy-five years to haul government traffic at half the regular commercial rates.

While no similar repealer has been put before the Senate, it is reported that proponents of the legislation are planning early action in that chamber.

The land-grant rates are special rates extended by the railroads to the government for carrying its freight, troops, war supplies and mail. They date back to the Civil war period, when transportation facilities were badly needed to bind the Far West closer to the union. As a means of encouraging the expansion of such facilities the government made grants to the carriers to supply them with rights of way and to assist them in financing their undertakings. No cash was paid for such land, but the company receiving it engaged itself to handle government traffic at the reduced (land-grant) rates.

The total amount of the land grants was about 125,000,000 acres, but the original cost of this land to the government was only ten cents an acre and contiguous land was valued at the time of the grants at less than $1 an acre. The government has long since been reimbursed many times over for this investment. In the first place, it served, as had been intended, to open up the West and to bring the various parts of the nation closer together economically, socially and politically, and in the process increased the value of the remaining public lands so that the government was able to raise its price to $2.50 an acre. In the second place, the government has realized very large savings in its transportation bill every year for more than a half century.

In time of war, the doubled expense of hauling government personnel, troops and materials would, of course, reflect back into the war cost bill, hence there would be nothing gained by the people but much by the railroads, which in wartime have plenty of business to do with resulting increment of profits. Hence there may be a question as to the advisability of enacting the repealer at this particular time, although an amendment added at the instance of Representative Hobbs, of Alabama, would look to public sharing in the relief. That amendment directs the Interstate Commerce Commission to take into account the increased revenues resulting from the repealer by making "appropriate readjustments" in the general rate structure.

The land-grant rates are an anachronism, which should long since have been wiped off the statute books. The only question debatable about the proposal is whether it would be worth while to repeal it now in time of war or make it effective at its close.

The Declining Supply Of Subsurface Water

THE THREAT to the basic resource of much of the most prosperous part of the United States is discussed in a Saturday Evening Post article on the declining supply of subsurface water. This decline has long been known to public officials who keep track of natural resources, to water utility engineers and to many individuals who have had to drill or dig their wells deeper to reach a new source of water.

Communities in many states have had enough experience with the first stages of decline into aridity to know what can happen. Wells give out, springs dry up, the stream flow is so reduced as to make the water unfit for slaking the thirst of people or animals. The farmer must then haul water, and usually that expedient, if long continued, proves to be so expensive that he begins to reduce his demand for water, probably by sacrificing his livestock. Industrial communities which depend on water in manufacturing processes have begun to show some interest in water conservation. But their interest was not aroused by warnings based on surveys. It did not flare up until they failed to get new factories, or perhaps lost established industries which did not wish to rest their future on an uncertain water supply.

Experts have been cautious about pointing out the obvious possibilities of water waste and failure to hold surface water until it can be absorbed. But among themselves they discuss what happens to land which is allowed to lapse into aridity by slow degrees. There comes a time when it is not worth the cost of building up the water supply. Farms are abandoned. Towns fall into ruin. The area sinks into a coma, the victim not of drought but of man's shortsightedness.

The Opportunity Of A Lifetime

A GIRL who signs up as an army nurse likely to be stationed in the South Pacific area is as good as married. In fact, nurses and American soldiers in that theater of operations are marrying at the rate of four couples a day. There are 3,000 nurses there and a number of them have been there for two years. In another year, at the present rate, all probably will be married. As the nurses are officers, they usually marry officers.

These romantic facts are vouched for by Lieut. Col. Martha J. Rose Clement, director of nurses in the South Pacific, who recently returned to the United States. In a press conference, Col. Clement remarked: "I am beginning to feel sorry for you girls back home." Stay-at-home American girls—eligible to become nurses—were advised by Col. Clement "to hang on to your men here, as you're going to have a number between the nurses and the Australian girls marrying the American boys stationed out there."

The nurses now are at every base in the South Pacific and sharing army life. Their morale is aided by beauty parlors, some of which are run by soldiers who once managed Fifth avenue glamor dispensaries.

To become an army nurse does sound like the opportunity of a lifetime.

Synthetic Rubber And Its Future

IN PREPARING for postwar resumption of world trade in the products of southeastern Asia, Britain is feeling out the attitude of the United States as to natural rubber. The British suggest an international agency, composed of both the producers and the consumers of natural rubber, to fix production quotas and set prices.

It is the contention of the British that there will be a rubber scarcity for perhaps three years after the war. Demand in the United States is expected to total more than 1,000,000 tons a year, a fifty per cent increase over the prewar figure. There is a probability that almost as soon as these needs are met by synthetic production, natural rubber will start pouring into world markets again. Then there will be serious overproduction.

The American rubber industry does not favor joining the British and the Dutch in a Far East rubber program. America has put $700,000,000 into its synthetic industry, compared to a $35,000,000 stake in natural rubber plantations. The United States will continue to use natural rubber mixed with synthetic to get the best results. But reliance upon the natural product of the British and Dutch plantations will never snap back to prewar levels.

This is more than an election year. It is a year of decision for the American people; the year when they will decide whether to return to the American concept of government or go the whole way to collectivism.

A new variety of contract bridge can be played by two persons. There goes our prize excuse—that we can't find a fourth.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Well, friends, the Browser has just been off on a cruise in a cargo ship with a sports writer named Tom O'Reilly who went along as a sea-going office boy and who has just written "Purser's Progress" (Doubleday Doran)—which is a very lively, funny and also serious book about going to sea in war time.

O'Reilly had a lot of fun living this book and writing it, but he isn't fooling. He was a sportswriter in New York who grew lonesome when the big sports figures began to disappear into uniforms and signed up as purser on this Liberty ship, S. S. Mulligan Stew which trudged down around the south end of Africa and up to Suez and back across the Atlantic and up the coast of South America.

O'Reilly is no griper. He seems to be able to get along with people and he's particularly fond of merchant seamen and also of the young seamen who formed the armed guard on the Mulligan. He does a little debunking of the prevailing idea that seamen get an awful lot more money than the armed guard. An ordinary seaman, says he, earns $22.50 a month plus bonuses which operate only in certain areas and while the ships at sea. Also he gets $5,000 free insurance but it's void only if he is killed by enemy action. The navy gunner receives only $66 a month but he gets a twenty per cent bonus all the time he's on board and his insurance covers everything. Maybe these facts don't interest you, but they did the Browser, so you're getting them.

And "Purser's Progress" makes a novel like Catherine Whitcomb's "The Maldives" (Random House) seem pretty hollow indeed. Not that it doesn't sparkle with wit on many pages. But these are not times when the average reader will have much patience with the sufferings of a pretty young lady who was left a spiritual cripple by the divorce of her father and the suicide of her mother; and who married a sophisticated and sadistic fellow, who married her to get away from his law partner's wife. And if they weren't blown up by the Germans in Rotterdam they're living together yet. The book is about fifteen years too late, opines the grumpy Browser.

On the other hand, you take a book like the Modern Library's "Life and Selected Writings of Thomas Jefferson," as edited by Adrienne Koch and William Peden, and you have something that is timeless—because Thomas Jefferson was an extraordinary, civilized human being who would have been at home in any society, in any age. A worthy book, with a sound and well-balanced introduction by the editors.

Oddest book of the year is William Steig's collection of fanciful drawings "About People" (Duell, Sloan and Pearce). Strange, out of this world stuff like the tiny man in the fishbowl, entitled "Dilemma" or the grown man in the runaway baby carriage ("Scare") or the morose lady rocking in a baby's crib ("Melancholia"). Gosh! says Marsh Maslin.

Effort To Appease Wheeler Is Linked With FCC Policy

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 4—Conjectures as to why staunchest anti-Rooseveltian Senator Wheeler spent forty-five unrevealed minutes with the president, died without convincing explanation because both parties refused to talk, even privately.

The common interpretation that Mr. Roosevelt was burying the bones of old antagonisms to get a campaign understanding with Wheeler was a natural deduction, but obviously the least of any story.

Mr. Roosevelt called Wheeler down to get him to take the leadership of the international communications settlement, the disposition of cable and radio rights. But this hardly reflected presidential altruism.

In Key Position

Wheeler is chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce committee through which any settlement legislation must go, and therefore is in a position to block anything the administration might do.

What Wheeler must have replied seems evident in ensuing results. A resolution is pending before his committee for an investigation of the subject to determine a policy, but no consideration has been given it yet. Whatever leadership Wheeler is to assume apparently is to be modest, and unburied.

This is not necessarily a personal matter. The administration's Federal Communications Committee Chairman Fly, if not the president, wants a world-wide postwar monopoly for communications. All would be under one company, privately owned, but under government control. Domestic wire conditions are in that same state since the Postal-Western Union merger.

Competition a Factor

Wheeler's liberalism (he ran with the elder LaFollette for the presidency, you know) might well make him hesitate, although he handled the WU-postal merger on the ground that such competition was financially deteriorating and likely to be fatal.

However, in a democratic state, competition is the indispensable necessity for protection of the consumer. Monopolies such as that of the Aluminum Company of America caused the government to go into the aluminum business during this war. The anti-trust act has been recognized as a good law for nearly three decades.

To protect the consumer in this instance, Fly proposes government control, an increasingly familiar device. But the consumer has not always been able to get satisfactory protection from government control, nothing like the protection offered by Hard Competition.

Better Service Given

Better service always was available to the public on competing western railroads than on non-competing eastern roads carrying more traffic, and all were under complete government control through Interstate Commerce Commission. The Postal for years had a slogan somewhat like this: "Remember what telegraph service was before Postal came into the field," against Western Union. It was a good advertising slogan, because everyone knew the service had been rotten.

Whether the people can get as much out of a government-controlled monopoly (with all its inner possibilities) than out of honest competition for public favor and public business, is something about which the public can have little doubt in view of its experience (the public not being immediately concerned with the issue of whether competing services can make money or how much). This used to be true liberalism.

But now the unauthenticated pretenders to liberal leadership increasingly favor monopoly under government auspices which seems to be far less in the public interest—if not more in their own.

Shuttle Bombing between England and Russia Is Seen as Great Strategic Aid

By DAVID LAWRENCE

claiming that any question of Mr. Roosevelt's personal ability or desire to go on, is just an innuendo concocted by those naughty naughty Republicans.

The published material, however, has come mostly from the White House, stoutly defending Mr. Roosevelt's physical eagerness to do battle with anyone, and the original story broke from his friend Aubrey Williams's lips some months ago.

One Democratic senator who spent some time with the president last week expressed surprise at his loss of weight, alteration of appearance, and thought him tired.

Barkley Feels Better

Senate Leader Barkley, whose figure is more open to public view, has lost fifteen pounds lately with radical alteration of his structure, but he says he feels better. Congressional guesses of the president's loss run up to twenty pounds. Other Democratic congressmen, who have sat close to him, received an opposite impression of his strength.

The guesses of these men range all the way from a suspicion that he is foxily resting for the campaign, to the down-right conviction that he will decide for reasons of health to make other arrangements. The most recent flurry of gossip—it is hardly even that, but only idle talk—is he may run his chief economic helper, Jimmy Byrnes.

My personal belief is he will run under any or all presently conceivable circumstances.

The New A. A. Degree

From the Charleston, W. Va., Daily Mail

Princeton University's announcement that the Associate in Arts degree will be awarded to war veterans who lack the time requisite for a Bachelor of Arts degree is a constructive contribution to the nationwide movement for an educational remobilization. This step, by one of the nation's leading universities, may encourage other institutions of higher learning to adopt a similar plan for aiding the returned veteran.

The chief value of the plan is that it gives the former service man documentary proof of some college training. This proof of even a limited college experience would be invaluable to the person who, finding it inadvisable to continue his formal education, went into the business world to seek employment. The future undoubtedly will reveal a greater need for men with some college background.

The "A. A." degree will be awarded on completion of four semesters, a half-way milestone on the eight-semester road to the customary "B. A." There will be no lowering in the quality of scholastic performance.

Princeton limits the degree to war veterans. No indication has been given that the degree will be made available to other students.

Persons who argue in favor of the "A. A." plan contend that the four years of college constitute an integral experience. Others point out that while a four-year college education is desirable, the real foundation is laid during the first two years. The remaining two years, they contend, focus on a narrowing field of concentrations. Since there are persons to whom the foundation means so much and the narrowing experience offers little advantage, the Princeton plan obviously affords many benefits.

WASHINGTON, June 4—The United States and Russia are at last Allied in fact as well as in theory.

For many months the big question that has been asked over and over again is why the American air forces do not have bases in Russia.

Today that question has been answered by the announcement that shuttle bombing is an established operation. It is a reality.

Thus, the dream of American airmen that they might be able to fly direct from Britain drop their bombs over France and Germany on the way, and land in Russia, without the necessity of the hazardous return trip to Britain, has finally been fulfilled.

The strategic significance of the move is incalculably great. Anyone who is familiar with the tactics of the British and American airmen knows that the German air force has been able to exact its biggest toll when our bombers had hit their targets and started back to England. It was often possible to deceive the German air force as to the destination of our bombers, but because of the way the German airfields are grouped around industrial cities, it was possible for the Nazis to wait until targets had been struck and then tackle the airmen on the return journey.

Feints Possible

The existence of fields of haven in Russia will make it possible for the British and American flyers to use all sorts of feints and maneuvers as to their real destination, then make a sudden descent on a particular target and fly on to Russia before the German air force can concentrate its defenses.

Likewise, flights that start from Russia can be routed in a dozen different ways back to Britain.

The shuttle system can be worked from Italy over Hungary and Rumania into Russia and then back to our bases in Italy.

This achievement has been long in the making. The Russians have been reluctant and hesitant to grant the bases for reasons which have never been fully explained but doubtless were justified at the time. One objection it is stated, was related to the fact that the United States and Japan are at war, but Russia is not at war with Japan and that any assistance given the United States in Europe might be looked upon by Japan as a forerunner of comparable assistance given in Siberia.

Same as Lend-Lease

Actually, however, no such precedent is being established. Russia for her own reasons will withhold Siberian air bases until such time as she believes it wise to grant them. If, indeed, they are ever granted. There is really no practical difference between the lend-lease aid that America has been giving to Russia for the war in Europe and the establishment of air bases which Britain and American flyers can use in the war that Britain, Russia and the United States are waging in common against Germany.

There is no doubt that the accomplishment of shuttle bombing and the opening of air bases for American and British flyers in Russia is a direct consequence of the Teheran conference. If President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill were able at that conference to convince Marshall Stalin of the importance of these bases and if nothing else had been done there, the risks in the hazardous journey taken by the president and the prime minister would now appear to have been well warranted.

Russians and Americans are fighting side by side from Russian territory—this is truly a climactic point in the second world war. More and more air power will be based in Russia and more and more help will be given Russia so that the great offensive from Russia against Germany this summer or this autumn will come to fruition with the maximum possible intensity.

Every Nazi City Doomed

Nazi Germany is slowly being encircled. There is no point inside Germany now that will be immune from heavy bombing. It may take many more months to accomplish the result, but every city and town in Germany where there is any factory production for war is doomed.

That is the meaning of the announcement made by Maj. Gen. John R. Deane, of the general staff here, who went to Russia at the head of an American military mission to put into effect large-scale bombing from Russian bases. The new deadline: "Eastern Command, the United States Strategic Air Force Somewhere in Russia," brings a historic announcement that will mean much not only during the war but in the friendship that must ensue between the United States and Russia after the war.

Convincing Language

From the Charleston, W. Va., Daily Mail

Recent tastes of Allied air might and artillery fire have brought about a notable change between the Nazi prisoners of war taken in Italy and those captured during the African campaign.

The former German captive was extremely arrogant. Even when American service men went out of their way to be kind and considerate, the Hitlerites sneered and shouted that Germany would win the war, "you just wait."

Prisoners taken in Italy recently are not at all the same. Instead of exuding the "superman" assumption, they act with surprising meekness. Apparently convinced that Germany will be defeated, they marvel at the superiority of American weapons. One Nazi "boy" soldier said he had heard our artillery was belt-fed like a machine gun.

Ten years of talking and arguing with these Nazis could not have made such a great difference in their attitude. The change is just another indication that an aggressor will respect you if you talk to him forcibly enough in "his own" language—a language of force. This fact offers a key to the success of the international peace organization which we form after the war. It must be built on a democratic principle, but it must be empowered to deal "convincingly with nations that try to encroach upon their neighbors."

Morning Motto

It is easy for men to write and talk like philosophers, but to act with wisdom, there is the rub.—RIVAROL.

New Fiscal Year Will See All-Time High in Spending

By CENTRAL PRESS

WASHINGTON—Budget bureau officials explain that the four billion, 800 million-dollar reduction in the war program for the next fiscal year, announced by President Roosevelt, represents a curtailment in the dollar volume of contracts to be let, but not a decline in actual government expenditures.

Cash outlays in the fiscal year beginning next July 1, they report, still are estimated at ninety-two billion dollars, as in the January budget.

This will be an all-time high. It will be two billion dollars more than estimated cash expenditures for the fiscal year to end at midnight, June 30.

What the president was saying, officials explain, was that there will be a net decline of four billion, 800 million dollars in the obligations which the government will incur in the next fiscal year to keep the war going. And this is based on the assumption that the war will continue at least until June 30, 1945.

Since there is a time lag between the letting of contracts and the final payment for the delivered article, cash outlays "drag some distance behind obligations."

The president disclosed that the war program of the United States government, considered in itself, had been cut back eight billion, 300 millions. But three and one-half billions had been added to the January program for additional lend-lease aid, so that the net curtailment was four billion, 800 millions.

Embarrassing Incident

Reliable sources on capitol hill have come up with the report of an amusing, almost embarrassing, sidelight on the highly explosive armed seizure of the Chicago plant of Montgomery Ward and company.

The report has just now begun to circulate while a special seven-member House committee is investigating the seizure by holding open hearings under chairmanship of Representative Robert Ramspeck, (D.) of Georgia.

It seems that after President Roosevelt ordered the seizure, the administration was set to have the plant turned over to War Production Board Chairman Donald Nelson.

The stage was set for Nelson to take over the sprawling mail order house by the Chicago river, using whatever means necessary to commandeer it and run it until the dispute between management and union was settled.

Then, at the last minute, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones was designated to take over instead.

The reason was that administration officials suddenly remembered that Nelson was chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck and company before he went to work directing production to win the war. In that role he was by position, at least—the Sewell Avery of Ward's greatest rival in the mail order business, a rival fighting for trade from all sections of the United States.

Certain officials, the report concludes, are considerably relieved they remembered in time to prevent that Nelson order.

Dewey and Roosevelt

The national party conventions in Chicago are drawing ever closer with no word from the executive mansions in Washington and Albany, but politics are confident it will be Franklin D. Roosevelt vs. Governor Thomas E. Dewey in the November elections.

F. D. R. has well over the majority of Democratic votes needed to nominate him and Dewey, counting uninstructed delegates that undoubtedly will vote for him, has the GOP nomination in the bag. Roosevelt is expected to maintain his tight-lipped silence right up to the convention, but it is believed he will accept a draft nomination. Dewey has said he is not a candidate, but his supporters predict he, too, will accept.

The Republican convention starts July 26 and the Democrats meet July 19.

No National Service Law

Any prospects the administration may have had for passage of national service legislation have gone aglimmering as result of the new draft program, easing up deferments for older men.

Members of Congress say there might have been a chance for such legislation last year, but there isn't any now. Proposals to force 4-Fs and other workers into war jobs also face the same fate.

THE BIRMINGHAM PLAN--Aids Ex-Servicemen

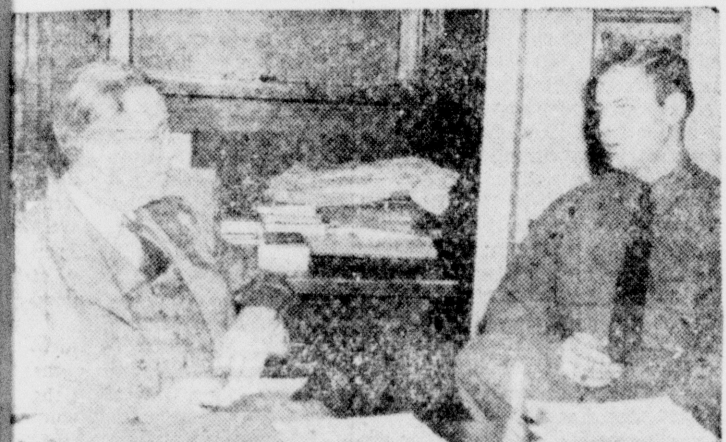

By Finding the Right Job for the Right Man

SALESMAN is what Frank Stanton, 34, always wanted to be and he had the qualifications. Here Stanton gets together with J. M. G. Parker, warehouse executive and SPB member. Frank got a good job.

By JERRY DREYER
Central Press Writer

DEAR SIR OR MADAM:

Your son is one of the many who is fighting this war for us. We are grateful to him for what he is doing.

Some time in the future, and we hope the time is near, he will be coming back to this country and he probably will be seeking employment here. When he does, we should like to help him locate a job of his own choosing.

BIRMINGHAM CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

In those few hopeful words a group of realistic-minded business men in Birmingham, Ala., have found a solution to a problem pressing on the minds of American boys in all corners of the world who are fighting to make this a better world for us at home.

These business men call it the Birmingham plan, and that it is proving successful is evidenced by interest being shown by communities throughout the land. They're asking how it operates, how it started.

The plan started with and is the brain child of 41-year-old Frank Rushton, Jr., president of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce. While on a recent tour of Alabama's hospitals, the energetic business man came across a soon-to-be discharged wounded doughboy who wanted work as a high tension man for Alabama Power company. Rushton telephoned the company's president, his friend, and the job materialized.

Pondering this later, Rushton wondered why the same could not be done for other returning fighting men. The offshoot was that he called together a number of business executives and broached the plan to them. They reacted enthusiastically. This came into being the Servicemen's Placement Advisory Board.

Few Questions Asked

Commenting on its operation, Rushton explained, "We don't ask a lot of questions. We just try to find a job and the kind of a job for which they are best suited."

How these jobs are secured is explained by the fact that the 60 members of the board—all top-ranking officials of business and industry—know most of the executives of plants and business houses in the city. Each member pledges to take over one afternoon a month at the C. of C. office. He will dispense with red tape and formality.

When the discharged serviceman walks into the green-carpeted office, the board member on duty welcomes him, invites him to sit down for a chat. Name, age, address, education, physical disability, if any, the kind of job wanted are the only vital statistics entered in the record.

"When a boy comes in," explained one member, "there are no aptitude tests nor attempts at psychoanalysis. We're not going to tell him 'You don't want to be a librarian like you think you do—you want to be an airplane mechanic.'"

"They're entitled to get anything they want or think they want and we intend to try to help them get it."

Once the idea is given of what the serviceman wants, the two decide on a specific company to call. An appointment is made for that day or the next with the company head. That's all there is to it. The task is made easier because many of the presidents of businesses have readily supplied their telephone numbers beforehand so that the interviewer shall have a ready list.

More Chances Given

Naturally, a returned soldier may insist on a job for which the interviewer knows he hasn't a chance of succeeding. If the job doesn't turn out, he can return for a second and third chance.

"They want our sympathy and help—and they're going to get it," is the feeling of the board members.

Parents and wives of men in uniform are endorsing the campaign enthusiastically, as evidenced by the many praise-filled letters being sent to the C. of C. One mother writes:

"I want to thank you for the interest you are taking in looking ahead to the employment of the servicemen after the war. I am sure my son along with many others will be made to feel a lot better by knowing that the folks at home are thinking of them so far away..."

A wife writes, "I'm sending you my husband's address. I appreciate it."

ate the fact, and I'm sure he will, too, that after they have all helped to win the war, they can feel they still have a place here, in the country they love...

The above testimonials and the fact that scores of other Chambers of Commerce throughout the country are considering similar projects prove that practically every American community will meet the obligation which falls on their shoulders.

"Rosie the Riveter" Showing at Maryland

Described by Vera Vague in Republic's new musical, "Rosie the Riveter" which is currently showing at the Maryland theater, as the guy with the "pug mug," Frank Jenks, who has an important part in the picture is also a guy who likes to toot his own, or anyone else's horn.

Jenks, in fact, began his theatrical career as a musician. He was wound up as an able comedian who can, when the occasion demands, turn in as neat a dramatic performance as any actor in the business.

During his college days at the University of Southern California, Jenks found himself doing to well as a band member that he organized an orchestra of his own. Playing theaters, clubs and for radio, Jenks sang, danced, played and acted as master of ceremonies for his musical aggregation. His comedy antics won for him his first screen role, playing the trombonist in "Pol-

Few High School Grads Are Filing Job Applications

Although there are plenty of jobs available, only a small number of high school graduates or other students, 16 or over, are applying for jobs during the summer months, Patrick J. Carroll, manager of the United States Employment office reports.

Cards were sent out to all county high school prospective graduates last week but only fifty have been returned filled out, Carroll said.

Many of the boys 16 and 17 seem interested in the navy or merchant marine while other who will reach 18 within the next few months probably want to spend the summer vacationing before entering the service, he pointed out.

The Kelly-Springfield Tire Company wants at least twenty youths for summer jobs and the Allegheny Ballistics Laboratory is interviewing girls for jobs at the Pinto laboratories.

An increase in the number of high school youths filing applications with the employment office is likely after current graduation exercises are over, Carroll believes.

and seven assists without an error. The Steelers jumped on Bill Stevenson for one run in the first inning and then sent him to the showers in the second when they pushed across four tallies.

Norman Geatz, in going the route for the Hismen, blanked the Brewers on six hits with Nick Perlozzo getting half of the safeties, including a double for the game's only extra-base score.

Mike Walters went to Stevenson's rescue with one out in the second and allowed one hit before being replaced at the start of the sixth by Derl Keller.

Westvaco, in winning its first game of the loop season, did everything in a big way. The Pulpmen lashed out eighteen hits and scored in every inning except the first.

The Indians, in absorbing their fourth consecutive setback, pushed across their lone tally in the third.

Clark Ross went all the way for Westvaco, scattering five hits and striking out seven. John Rogish started for Midland and was relieved by M. J. Yelder. Rogish was charged with the defeat.

Wayne Raines sparked the Westvaco attack with three for five while Tom Michaels had three for six. Every Westvaco starter made at least one hit. No Midland player had more than a single blow. The box scores:

After the Dodgers had scored two runs in the first game of the nightcap, the Cubs went to the front in the third with four runs, Phil Cavaretta and Andy Pafko hitting home runs with one on each.

The Cubs scored four more off Hal Gregg in the next inning to take an 8-2 lead. Paul Erickson weakened in the sixth and Claude Passeau took over. The Dodgers scored in the ninth on an error by Don Johnson.

The Dodgers blew the opener in the ninth inning when the Cubs scored two unearned runs on an error by Eddie Basinski. Cal McLish walked two men, and Basinski fumbled Pafko's grounder to fill the bases. Dom Dalesandro's fly and a single by Johnson scored the two runs. The scores:

Outsider Takes Belmont Stakes; Pensive Second Derby and Preakness Win-near Fails in Bid for Triple Crown

By ORLO ROBERTSON

NEW YORK, June 4 (AP)—The turf's three-year-old division has a new candidate for title honors following Bounding Home's conquest of Fensive in last Saturday's Belmont stakes but the impression remains that the name of the Kentucky derby and Preakness winner would be on the select role of triple crown winners today had he been given a different type of a ride.

In the derby and Preakness, Conn McCreary waited until the last quarter of a mile to make his run with the chestnut from Warren Wright's Calumet farm. In the Belmont he shot Pensive to the front at the mile post and, when challenged by William Ziegler, Jr.'s colt at the quarter-pole, the son of Hyperion didn't have enough left to match Bounding Home's stretch drive. A half-length separated them at the end of the mile and one-half.

Newsom, who failed to win a game in his stay with the Browns last season, gave up ten hits including a home run by Vernon Stephens, and all three of the St. Louis runs in the first contest.

The Browns won the nightcap when Jack Kramer, who replaced Jack Jakucki on the mound in the eighth, singled Mark Christman home from second base after two were out. Christman had reached second on a double. The scores:

sweet and liberal, even upright.
Loved by your friends and all whom you knew.
A wonderful husband and father
were you.

Red Cross Blood Donor Project Opens Here Today

Approximately 300 More Donors Are Needed for Next Week

All is in readiness for the opening of the two-week Blood Donor project of the American Red Cross which will open this afternoon at 1 o'clock in Masonic temple, Joseph H. Cromwell, chairman, announced last evening.

The mobile unit will arrive here this morning and will be set up under the direction of Walter H. Suter, special assistant of the Baltimore chapter.

The first step in the process will be the packing, with dry ice, of the 400 pound Church containers in which the individual pint bottles of blood will be shipped to the laboratories.

Will Conduct Projects

Perhaps the busiest man in the unit will be Lt. Charles Smith, navy physician, who will be in charge of bleeding and hemoglobin tests.

Since eight persons can be cared for each fifteen minutes, he will be able to spend less than two minutes with each donor.

The American Red Cross flag is already flying from Masonic temple which, Cromwell said, is in perfect condition for the opening of the project. Red arrows will point out headquarters to persons not familiar with the section.

300 Donors Needed

Although all appointments for this week have been made, approximately 300 more donors will be needed for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week. Mrs. Porter D. Collins, scheduling chairman, announced last evening.

All appointment cards for this week had been mailed by last evening, Mrs. Collins said. Although every effort was made to give prospective donors the time asked for, in some cases the committee was forced to assign the next best time.

In some cases, it has been impossible to schedule persons this week, Mrs. Collins explained. However, if those persons will contact the registration committee by phone, 2578, every effort will be made to fit them into the second week's schedule.

To Serve Refreshments

Coffee, tea or milk and a sandwich will be served to all donors after they have given their blood. The campaign committee will also serve daily lunches to the staff of the mobile unit.

The Office of Price Administration here has assured Cromwell that it will reimburse drivers for the gasoline used during the project. Additional cars and drivers will be needed.

Appointments must be rigidly adhered to if the Blood Donor service project is to be successful here, Cromwell said. Even a few broken appointments or tardy attendance will throw the project off schedule.

Aim of Education Is To Guide Man, Priest Declares

School Life only Beginning of Education, Father Landrigan Says

Actual school life is only a part of education, the Rev. Lawrence P. Landrigan, pastor of St. Mary's church, told the eleven members of the graduating class of St. Mary's high school at commencement exercises held last evening.

"It belongs only to the beginning and the completed preparation of the upbringing of youth, for no illusion is more harmful than to pack into school education the entire process of shaping the human being," the speaker declared.

"Our education goes on through life until death as graduates have only finished a partial task. Your education has combined what is intellectual with what is moral. Education cannot escape the question: 'What is Man?' It needs to know what man is, what is his nature and destiny and the scale of values that are involved. Without knowing these things and shaping man accordingly education loses all human sense and becomes the training of an animal for the mere utility of the state."

Education is not mere animal training, Father Landrigan asserted—"it is a human awakening, with respect for the soul as well as for the body."

Stresses Education Aim

"The aim of education is to guide man as he shapes himself into a human person armed with knowledge, strength of judgment and moral virtue, at the same time conveying to him the spiritual heritage of the nation and the civilization in which he is involved, reserving in this way the century old achievements of past generations."

Father Landrigan stated that to succeed in life is not the same as achieving a successful career. "A man may by natural talent attain eminence in his profession and acquire wealth and yet he may prove a failure in life. For a career is not an end but a means."

"A mere livelihood is not life, though a man ordinarily needs a sufficiency of material goods to live. A person may succeed as doctor, lawyer, merchant or politician and yet fail as a man because of giving up the virtuous code that stamps real values on living. To fail as a man is to fail in life for the achievement of manhood or womanhood is the ultimate purpose of living."

Eleven seniors receiving diplomas were Anna Catherine Smith, Madeleine Basile, Mary Carnachia, Rita Spicer, Mary Julian, Dorothea Brinker, Mary Lou Carroll, Rita Snyder, Patricia Brinker, Maxine Monnett and Elizabeth Uplinger.

Seniors Attend Breakfast

Members of the graduating class were guests of the alumnae association at breakfast in the church hall following the 8:30 o'clock mass. The Rev. W. Joyce Russell was toastmaster. Miss Adelaide Heston welcomed the seniors and Mary Lou Carroll responded in behalf of the graduating class. Seventy-five attended the breakfast.

Father McKeown Urges Seniors To Stick To Ideals

Tells Graduates To Stand Aloof From Indifferent, Careless World

Addressing the graduating class of Catholic Girls Central high school yesterday morning in St. Patrick's church, the Rev. Francis McKeown, assistant pastor, told the sixteen seniors to stick to their teachings and ideals and asserted that if they do this the answer will be success as well as peace and contentment.

"Let us be different, let us be distinguished, make your lives worthwhile and make yourselves outstanding," the speaker declared. "You can do this if you live up to your teachings and hold fast to your ideals."

To be different, Father McKeown explained, does not mean to be peculiar. However, it does mean to stand aloof from an indifferent and careless world, he said.

Only Source of Contentment

"Not so long ago your mothers and fathers took the same place you now hold—and today their prayer is that you meet the test," the priest said. "They hope and pray you will be distinguished, that you will be different. They will agree and add with emphasis that this is your only source of contentment, your only assurance for happiness, your only key to success."

"So for you our prayer is that you might have light to see and strength to live up to a motto that will make life worthwhile—a motto that will show appreciation to your parents. Let us be distinguished, let us be different."

The Rev. Father Charles W. Bogan presented diplomas to the graduates after the Rev. Thomas A. Hardesty read the names of the seniors.

Homes for Needy Children Sought

Foster homes for needy Allegheny county children will be sought this month by the Allegheny County Welfare Board, Roy W. Eves, chairman announces.

One of the reasons for the effort to find homes for children, Eves pointed out, is the fact that institutions which used to take children, no longer can do so, mostly because of a shortage of help.

At present the welfare board has about thirty children in approved foster homes. There is a general increase in the number of children needing homes and it is urgent that more homes be found, the chairman said.

Some of the reasons children need care away from their own homes are chronic illness of one or both parents, or homes broken by death, separation or divorce.

None of the children is available for adoption since it is hoped that all can be eventually reunited with their own families.

The Allegheny County Co-ordinating Council has endorsed the campaign and members of this group will assist in the distribution of pamphlets.

Persons who are interested in the program may contact the Welfare board at 301 Cumberland street or phone 247, Eves said.

Officials Entitled To Pay Increase, Attorney Asserts

Answer Filed Saturday Says Mayor, Council Got Boost Legally

Dismissal of the test suit, filed in circuit court, to determine whether the mayor and city council had authority to take a ten per cent pay raise, was requested by City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett in his answer filed Saturday with the court.

The test suit was filed by Simon G. Mock, 21 West First street, a Baltimore and Ohio car inspector, through Attorney Estel G. Kelley and it is generally assumed that Mock permitted the use of his name at the request of Mayor Thomas S. Post, who had declared that he did not believe the increase was intended for the mayor and council. All municipal employees were granted a pay increase under an act of the legislature in 1943.

In his answer the city attorney admits that Mock is a citizen of Cumberland and a taxpayer but asserts that Mock pays only $120 a year taxes and as a result his interest in the suit, brought solely in his behalf, "is so infinitesimal as to lack a justifiable interest."

His reply also stated, "the mayor and city council are general city employees and public servants, not casual or temporary employees." It also pointed out that the officials are charged with administration of various duties defined by law, "but do not constitute the government itself."

The position filed by Mock, May 14, declared the act was designed to aid municipal employees in meeting of the rising cost of living.

In the recent city election campaign Mayor Post and Hunter B. Helfrich made an issue of the matter and asserted the mayor and councilmen should not have been included in the salary increase. Following their election both officials returned ten per cent of their April pay checks to the city auditor.

Mrs. Elizabeth R. Lewis, Williams road, mother of three children, has filed suit in circuit court here for a divorce from Clarence Edward Lewis. The suit was filed in the name of her father, Samuel A. Rankin, by Lewis M. Wilson, attorney, since Mrs. Lewis is not yet 21-years-old.

The couple were married here July 11, 1940 and the children range from 3 years to one month in age. Mrs. Lewis charges that her husband was cruel, beat her and threatened her life, and also that he has been unfaithful. She asks the custody of the three children.

Associate Judge William A. Huster ordered Lewis to pay $20 a week for support of the children, and he is forbidden to enter the home or remove any household articles.

In another suit filed Saturday Plus L. Myers seeks a divorce from Pearl M. Myers on undisclosed grounds.
